

SS CM and MM set the bell curve in week 15

KS MS and DP lose ground heading into X-mas weekend

Effective date: 2020-12-22

The headlines tell the story of week 15, and it could well be enough to now say that this is now a 3 team race for the ever elusive title. KS, MS and DP would beg to differ and ask PFVCC journalists to retract their claims that they are out of it just yet, but the proof is in the eggnog and at this point all three of them would hope that its spiked (please drink responsibly). SS, CM and MM all split their differences and put up 12 wins a piece to keep things the same on the leaderboards for the third week straight...Advantage SS as he has been able to keep the 3 game cushion and now just needs to stave off the pack for two more weeks to be crowned the Champ for the... I'll let him tell you how many times, if he in fact can pull it off. But for now, we still have 33 games to pick and if my math is still as sharp as it once was in 7th grade this is still anything but over!

We had 4 loners on display in week 15, as 2020 continues to prove to be the season for the loner. CM got off to a hot start right off the bat as he hit on his TNF loner with LAC over OAK. Good stuff CM! The rest of the field was not so hot as DR missed on JAX over BAL and SR went 0-2 with WAS and HOU both losing in close games. Tough takes gentlemen, but it's Christmas time so there's still something to be joyful for.

Christmas week is upon us here in 2020 and it has gifted us with probably the best slate of games so far this season. So may the games be close, your Christmas be bright, and your picks go your way.. Wishing you all a very Merry Christmas to you and your families!

Still Pimpin',

LF