

Week 10 was about who was the best of the worst

DP and BS lead with 7 wins; standings tighten up top

Effective date: 2021-11-17

More than halfway through the season and you'd think that we would have figured something out by now...and then this fickle sport reminds us that it just isn't that easy to pick winners week to week. With all but two members notching losing records on the week, week 10 came down to the goo and who could knock down the few elusive wins. BS and DP navigated the week the best out of the bunch reeling in 7 wins a piece, and with a season that has been tough for these two, a top place finish has to feel good! Well done fellas! Next in line were the trio of LF, SS and MS with 6 wins, who are all vying for spots atop the leaderboards. This week proved to be big for them as SR saw his lead dwindle after a tough week 10 skid. With things tightening down at the top and the stretch drive approaching it'll be interesting to see who can handle the pressure. Will SR bounce back and deliver in week 11? Or will LF, SS and company be able to keep their foot on the gas and get over the hump late in the season? Oh, we have some epic weeks ahead of us!

The loner pick onslaught slowed down this past week as we had a single loner chosen for the first time this season. KS was the holder of that loner and it might be one he'd want back since his ATL pick got shell shocked by DAL. Nonetheless we nod to the attempt and know that he will be back with another winner soon! We look forward to it KS!

We move on to week 11 where membership looks to battle back and get out of the funk of the previous two weeks. I'm certain that this group of pickers is not looking for the MIP to turn into the LIP (Late-season indifference phenomenon) so I expect to see some big weeks posted... the only question is, who will it be? Best of luck Football heads!

Your President,

LF